

“I couldn't live without...”

Keoka Ketcher
Corporate business office consultant

Staff members at Cornerstone Health Care in Rogers, AR, say they're more than pleased with the company's recent decision to move toward a more advanced, electronic process for new, existing or paper documentation.

It's Electronic Document Manager, or “e-Doc” as the staff at CHC calls it. “What it does for me is saves time ... and lots of it,” offers corporate business office consultant Keoka Ketcher.

There are just two simple components: a quick-scan unit, and an all-in-one, touch-screen/kiosk. With them, Ketcher says she can minimize payment errors of omissions by integrating accounts payable and receivables records.

She said she can also share admissions packets online, grant easy accessibility to documents from all facilities and have all documents automatically indexed.
